PRICE TWO CENTS

Sportscene by Lyle

Among the varied college activities available for exploitation by the "complete" college man, or woman, or child, perhaps none are of such paramount importance and benefit in wartime as those of an athletic nature.

Any university of note is well endowed with a gymnasium or the plural form of that word, plus the occasional coach thrown in for the same sports fee. (Coaches are not of the rolling type in most cases). It remains for the budding college man to exercise his inherent right of taking proper advantage of his dutiful opportunities, in regard to development of the body beautiful, or whatever may be your term for it.

To the uninitiated, the wise selection of a necessitated narrow field of endeavour toward that end often presents somewhat of a problem. It is mainly toward this unfortunate group that we direct our sincere and heartfelt advice in the lines that are to follow.

For the purpose of avoiding what might seem preferential order in the consideration of each, let us proceed alphabetically through the various forms of muscular recreation. This is in accordance with their order of appearance in the Handbook, page 68.

BADMINTON

This dainty but dashing game is played by two or four participants, nattily attired in prim white shorts, tops (sometimes), and shoes, and equipped with a racquet, an air-minded bundle of feathers (probably a throwback from the ego of a frustrated hen), and a beaming smile. Sometimes a much duller game is engaged in wherein the players are both, or all of the same sex. In this case the usual equipment is employed with the exception of the smile. This has no useful function here and is replaced by the much more practical leer. Here too, the opponents literally "give one another the bird," with growing satisfaction at each succeeding stroke. This raises the obvious question whether there exists in England a parallel expression of "to give one another the shuttlecock," since there, this latter term in the one usually employed to the slightly bundle of feathers. However, we must not confuse the issue with such digression.

The advantages of such a sport as Badminton are obviously too great in their scope to allow detailed enumeration and elucidation in a review such as this. However, it is doubtless advisable to point out to the uninitiated that this is a sport which can be "tackled" in a degree of intensity adjustable to personal requirements or desires.

For instance, the sweetest Co-ed may engage in several games during the evening without so much as ruffling a new permanent, and be able to look even more alluring than ever for the dance, which usually follows these get-togethers of the Badminton Club. On the other hand, two blood and thunder he-men can quite effectively work one another into a state of semi-coma, in which white feathers flit by their eyes for the next seventeen days, during a quarter of an hour's strenuous, all-out play.

I think the reader will now recognize that Badminton has its points off the scoreboard as well as on it... if you see what we mean. In particular, we advise this form of pastime for girls in Arts, and men in Engineering.

Volunteer Registration Booths Open Today In Main Campus Buildings

No One Under Eighteen Years
To Sign Blood Donor Forms

Today marks the beginning of the voluntary registration of students for McGill's war effort. Registration booths, under the direction of the Red Wings, will be set up, in all the principal campus buildings and will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day. The objective set by the committee, at a meeting last night, is 100 per cent. registration of the student body.

Each prospective registrant will be given two forms to fill in. Of these, one is the standard Blood Donor form of the Red Cross, and the other is a special form, prepared by the War Council for the use of McGill students only. The former of these two forms should not be used by anyone less than eighteen years old, and should be accompanied by the written permission of the parents of any registrant between the ages of eighteen and twenty-one. However, there is one major change in the Blood Donor situation this year; women will be taken as well as boys, and are strongly urged by the Red Cross to register, since the North African campaign is making great demands upon this service.

Form Described

The special McGill form begins by asking the volunteer to check off all free hours. This does not necessarily mean every hour that is not occupied by a lecture or by military training, but merely those hours that can be spared for essential war work. The first two questions, requesting people to register for war work in industry and as human Guinea-Pigs, are not likely to be acted upon immediately, but are included to meet an emergency.

Friday Deadline For Photographs Of Graduates

Students Listed
On Page Four
Of This Issue

The deadline for graduating students to be photographed for "Old McGill '43" has been set by the Annual Board for Friday. These photographs are taken at Jacoby Studios on Crescent St., just below Sherbrooke.

On page four of the 'Daily' appears a list of those students who have not yet gone for their photos. These people must visit the Studios any day this week and have their pictures taken. If any student fails to do this by Friday, the Annual Board states that it cannot guarantee that this graduating student will appear in this year's Annual. This deadline will be strictly adhered to.

Less than fifty students are still to be photographed. Because of the difficulties of securing paper and other essentials of the Annual and the resultant need for speed in its production, the Board announces that it will not delay setting up the book for the sake of any who neglect the deadline.

Students' Society Meets Tomorrow In Union

Culliton Call-up Will Be Discussed At the Gathering

A meeting of the Students' Society has been called for tomorrow, and will be held in the Union. The subject under discussion at this meeting is to be the much-publicized question of the draughting of Professor John Culliton of the Department of Economics.

This meeting was called by a large number of undergraduates, in a protest against the supposedly unquestioned call-up of a well-known member of the staff, which was first made known at a meeting of the Political Economy Club last Thursday. At this meeting, and since that time the following resolution, around which the discussion will revolve, has been passed around and signed by a large proportion of those students who have, at some time, taken lectures or have been harvesting with Professor Culliton.

Professor Culliton, who has been for many years a member of the Economics Staff, and a well-known lecturer in the first year Economics courses, was recently in the limelight in connection with the harvest trip. He was in charge of the McGill Contingent of Harvesters that journeyed to Saskatchewan.

It was emphasized that although Prof. Culliton is interested in continuing his work at the University, he is not averse to accepting the draft call, if such action is deemed in the best interests of the nation.

The resolution, as drafted by the executive of the Political Economy Club reads as follows:

"Whereas we are given to understand that Professor J. T. Culliton of the Economics Department has received a call-up notice from the Canadian Army;

"Whereas we believe that Professor Culliton's most valuable contribution to the War Effort is associated with his present work;

"Whereas we recognize that the government is defeating its own ends by conscripting professors when it permits the student body

Play Tryouts Continue Today

Male Actors
Required for Productions

The tryouts for the regularly scheduled productions of the English Department will continue today and Friday from 3.00 to 5.30 p.m., in Moysse Hall.

The Department wishes to stress particularly that there is a great need for men students and it is hoped that they will answer this call at some time during the two remaining tryout periods. Men students can be assured that rehearsals of the various productions will be scheduled so as not to interfere with time tables and military training.

Production plans for the coming year are still tentative but as they stand now there will be one children's play and one act studio plays. There is also the possibility of a major production.

The parts for the plays will be assigned immediately and this will afford the actors the opportunity of the Christmas holidays to learn lines and business. This way rehearsals will go ahead more quickly when lectures are resumed after the holidays. However, production of these plays has been arranged so that they will not clash with the January examination period.

Arts and Crafts Exhibit Is Shown in Redpath

The Arts and Crafts Exhibition is now open in the Redpath Library. Everybody is welcome to come and visit the exhibition, and suggestions for future exhibitions will be greatly appreciated, and should be put in the box provided for that purpose, stated a member of the committee. This is the Third Annual Exhibition, and will run for two weeks.

There are some 80 exhibitors in all, and over 250 objects. These include wood-carvings, book-ends, plaques and colour wood-cuts. There are sculpture portrait-heads, soap-carvings and many leather articles including gloves, belts and wallets, as well as water-colour and oil portraits of famous Canadian scenes.

There is also a photography section with many pictures of the Laurentians, Saskatchewan and Niagara Falls, as well as some of campus life.

Women's Union To Be Addressed By MacLennan

Author Speaks
On Problems of
Post-war Canada

The Women's Union will meet tomorrow in the RVC Common Room, at 4.00 p.m. as was originally planned, because the hour announced yesterday has been found to conflict with that of the Students' Executive Council meeting.

The speaker will be Hugh MacLennan, author of the novel, "Barometer Rising," which has been most favourably received both by critics and public alike. Mr. MacLennan's address, entitled "Canada and the People's War," will emphasize the significance of the Second World War, and the resultant problems of cementing Canadian unity which will arise after the war.

New Date Set For Daily Party

Staff to Be Entertained
In Two Weeks

The Daily staff party, originally scheduled to take place this Friday, has been postponed until Friday night, December 18. The change in the date has been made so that the party will not conflict with other organizations holding meetings in the Union on Friday.

The party will be a combination of a Daily and Christmas party. It will give the members of the staff a chance to get acquainted, and also give the Editorial Board an opportunity to entertain the rest of the members.

Refreshments will be served, and there will be dancing as well as some sort of entertainment, which is being planned by certain members of the staff. As a great deal of trouble is being taken to make this party an entertaining one, it is hoped that as many as possible of the Daily members will attend, and bring their friends. This will be the first Daily party of the season. More details will be announced later.

Club Hispanico to See Movies on South America

Today at 8.00 p.m. the Club Hispanico will meet in the Union Grill room to see a colour movie from South America. This picture was taken two years ago by Dr. Hans Slye who represented Canada in a congress of Endocrinology held at Montevideo. This picture shows views from Canada, New York, Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, and Panama, with some scenes from McGill.

After the picture has been shown, refreshments will be served, while Spanish American music is played. The couples will then enjoy dancing for the rest of the evening.

The executive council plans to give a good entertainment and cordially invites all students interested in learning Spanish to come to this meeting.

Students Form League Branch

Martin Blames
Governments
For Failure

"We should make neutrality impossible," said Dr. C. P. Martin at a gathering of some 50 students last night in the Union Grill Room, where a pro-tem executive of three were elected by the newly-formed McGill Branch of the League of Nations Society.

Dr. Martin, president of the Montreal Branch of the League of Nations Society, stated that the League of Nations had not "failed," but had been let down by the nationalistic governments which it represented. "Looking back," he continued, "it seems pathetic to realize the faith pinned on the League of Nations by the peoples of the world." Dr. Martin blamed the United States for not having been "mature enough to realize how much this planet had shrunk." This tragic mistake, said Prof. Martin, started the League of Nations off on the wrong foot.

Dr. Martin again emphasized that the League had failed only "as an instrument for preventing war," but had succeeded in regulating the narcotics trade, in preventing "at

Smith Speaks To Pro-Medicals

Meeting to Be Held Tomorrow
In McGill Union

The Pre-Medical Society will hold a meeting tomorrow at 5.00 p.m. in the McGill Union. Dr. Frederick Smith, of the Department of Bacteriology, will be the guest speaker. The topic of his speech will be the "Problems of the Pre-Medical Student."

Dr. Smith was born in England and obtained his B.A., M.A., M.B., and Ch.B. from the University of Cambridge. He became the Surgical Out-patient officer of London Hospital in 1927. Dr. Smith later became the Resident House Physician at the same institution. In 1929 he came to the Rockefeller Institute as a research assistant. He remained there for two years, after which he came to McGill as lecturer in the Bacteriology Department. Dr. Smith is a member of the Osler Reporting Society and of the McGill Chapter of the Sigma Chi. In the past few years he has written several articles and papers on the Vascular Permeability.

The vice-president of the Society stated yesterday that a topic of such common interest will give the members an opportunity to carry on the informal discussion period that the executive plans to be a feature part of every meeting this year.

Radio Locators Stationed Here Are Invited to be Present

Both Col. J. M. Morris, M.C., V.D., officer commanding the McGill C.O.T.C. and Flying Officer G. A. Firby, officer in charge of the U.A.T.C. at McGill, have given permission to students to wear their uniforms at the Junior Prom, which is to take place in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gym on Friday, December 11th at 10.00 p.m.

Mark McKeown, chairman of the Prom Committee, has had to resign this position, since he is leaving for Brockville in the near future. Bob Watt has been appointed to replace him.

In addition to this announcement also came a definite report from the Committee that corsages will be banned at this formal. To replace this, carnations of various shades will be sold at the dance.

Students wishing to make arrangements for parties and table reservations are advised to do so now. These reservations will be accepted in the McGill Union Tuck Shop between the 7th and 10th of December.

This dance is the first campus formal of the year and the Junior Prom Committee has invited the members of the R.C.A.F. Radio Mechanics stationed at McGill to attend. Flight Lt. G. B. S. Fuller, O.C. of this detachment, has announced that those wishing to attend the dance will be given all-night leave. Tickets for the airman are on sale at their Orderly Room.

Question Of Dress
The question of what dress should be worn at the Junior Prom has been given attention by students around the Campus. In response to several requests the military authorities have agreed to permit students to wear their uniforms to the dance. Students coming in the C.O.T.C. uniforms will be allowed to wear light shoes. In the case of the Air Force, light black shoes and socks may be worn. The Committee also wishes it to be known that contrary to any rumors otherwise, both tails and tuxedos will be in order at the dance.

Bob Watt, representing the School of Commerce and business manager on the Junior Prom Committee, has become the new chairman of the committee.

The order banning corsages will be strictly adhered to, stated a member of the Prom Committee.

Music Notes

THE PRATT RECITAL

The young Canadian pianist Ross Pratt played to a most enthusiastic and sympathetic audience when he appeared in the first of a series of recitals at Royal Victoria College on Friday last. His program was well-chosen and well-balanced, and it was especially gratifying to see the inclusion of so many early selections of program music, not only as a change from the stock formula of Bach, Beethoven and Brahms, but also because of the fact that this type of music is so often unjustifiably slighted in the selection of programs for solo recitals.

Mr. Pratt's performance was outstanding in its display of technical facility, but his musicianship, although brilliant at times, was immature, especially in selections requiring a rapid change of mood. Experience and maturity may develop in Mr. Pratt those qualities that are at present lacking in his work.

His program opened with the Bach Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue. The tone throughout the Fantasy was sonorous on the whole, yet noticeably uneven and rather blurred in some of the chromatic broken chord runs, and his technique was flawless, with a slight tendency towards harshness in the martellato. The concluding portion was feelingly interpreted, the minor passages fading naturally into a Tierce di Picardie at the end. The technique and rhythm of the Fugue were superb throughout. One had a feeling of a certain haste towards the end which rather obscured the effective entries of subject so that they could not easily be recognized.

The Largo from the Concerto in F was played with a quiet yet singing tone, but a little too impersonally, with very little rubato, which made the phrasing a trifle awkward at times.

The King's Hunt, an early work by the English composer John Bull, was a fitting contrast to the quiet Largo preceding. This piece has been arranged by Claxton—that is to say over-arranged, and over-ornamented with the result that the contrasts descriptive of the horse's change in gait in the original version, are destroyed, and the clever echoing effect of the horns is also eliminated.

In the Siciliana and Rigaudon, Mr. Pratt again demonstrated that he is at his best in pieces that do credit to his fine bravura style. There was not enough contrast in mood between the two, suggesting that the artist finds it difficult to achieve a quick change from a reflective mood to a more lively one.

The second group of his program was made up of the entire twelve études comprising Opus 10 of Chopin's works. These were played without interruption, a rather remarkable feat. Mr. Pratt had rearranged the order in which these études are usually played, and the change was most effective.

The opening étude in C major was notable for its excellent basses, and was brilliantly played on the whole. In the E Flat minor étude following, there was lacking a continuity of flow which became decidedly erratic as the music progressed so that the melody came in spurts, as it were. The G Flat Major Étude was excellently rendered. It was sprightly and possessed the true Chopinesque charm.

The E Flat Major étude, with its familiar rolled chords, is one of the most difficult in the series. This had the melodic flow that the second lacked, and Mr. Pratt's fifth finger, right hand, was truly Herculean. The Revolutionary Étude followed at such a furious pace that one felt the need of a little rubato, especially in the snatches of octave theme in the right hand which require a more impressive tone. The A Flat Major possessed a liquidity of tone eminently suitable and tasteful. In the F Minor Étude, Mr. Pratt did not seem steeped in its mood, and made of it a mere technical display, with tone actually harsh in spots. The F Major was a happy choice after F Minor, as the change in key tonality was refreshing. Mr. Pratt was here in a merry mood which perfectly suited the étude, and the left hand theme was effectively contrasted to the rippling right hand. The second étude in C Major, which is Number Seven in the collection, and a difficult one, was played with amazing facility. The familiar E Major étude with its plaintive, tender theme did not carry conviction, perhaps because there are widely divergent opinions on its interpretation. The A minor étude was rather colorless with its stilted tone. The concluding Étude in C Sharp Minor was also amazing in its perfect technical accuracy, especially since it was the last in a long, and difficult series of études.

Of his two encores, the popular Rachmaninoff Prelude in G Minor was more favorably impressive to this reviewer than anything the artist had previously done. His singing tone, which had not been remarkable heretofore was easily the best of the evening, especially in the melodic middle section.

The mere fact that Mr. Pratt could accede to the audience's demands for one encore, let alone two, was additional tribute to his truly exceptional technical prowess, and the abandon and verve with which each encore was rendered gave more promise than any single number of the foregoing program.

The City

The liner was ploughing peacefully through the waves, but there was a strange feeling of expectancy in the air. It had been that way for days, but it seemed now to have reached a climax. That evening, they were scheduled to reach the city.

Seagulls were thronging about the vessel, bearing witness to the fact that land was not far away. The sides of the vessel were bulging with hundreds of pairs of eyes, searching the horizon for traces of the land which should come into view at any time.

Early in the afternoon, land was sighted, and an excited buzz of conversation passed around the decks, as the steamer picked its way into a picturesque inlet. The sun was just setting as the liner docked, bathing the city in a golden glow. As dusk was falling, the passengers filed silently down the gangway and set off to explore the mysteries of the city before them.

First and foremost, there was a Tivoli, as in Copenhagen, with its galaxy of fun fairs and booths. Then there were the night clubs and cafes, Parisian style, the beer gardens, as of Berlin, and the theatres and operas from Vienna. All of these contributed to the blissful forgetfulness of time, and dawn came long before the revelling ceased.

Then there was revealed, in all its beautiful majesty, the architectural beauty of the city, rather like Stockholm, with its skyline broken by the Rockefeller Centre. In the distance could be seen Helsinki's railway station, at the foot of a hill topped off by Edinburgh's castle.

Underneath rumbled a well planned system of subway trains, racing across the city in an incredibly short time. Across the street was a spacious park, one corner crowded with soap box orators. Thronging the sidewalks were a smiling people, apparently without a care in their minds.

Suddenly, the picture faded. There was an ear-splitting roar. The world seemed to turn upside-down. Then came the wall of the sirens, giving the stern command to take to the life-boats. Sleepy and cold, the passengers began their battle with the might of the Atlantic.

LUDMILLA PITOEFF

CLAUDEL AT L'ERMITAGE

The Federation of Catholic Alumni is presenting Madame Ludmilla Pitoeff, the great French artist, with the "Compagnons de St. Laurent" in Paul Claudel's beautiful drama, "L'annonce faite à Marie," known as "Tidings Brought To Mary."

This dramatic poem, a masterpiece of French literature, besides having been played everywhere in Europe from various translations, has also been played in New York and Chicago from the English translation by Miss Louise Morgan Sill, and was very happily praised by the critics.

Madame Pitoeff is directing the play herself and will take the part of "Violaine" which she also took in New York when the work was created there in French during the month of May, 1942. All critics agreed that the great artist's interpretation of Claudel's theatre is perfect and unequalled.

"L'annonce faite à Marie" is a play that the elite of theatre-goers will want to see; it will be given at L'Ermitage, Guy Street, near Sherbrooke, Friday and Saturday evenings, December 4th and 5th at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are on sale from Ed Archambault and at CA. 0336.

Political Comment

WILLKIE—PLUS A GRAIN OF SALT.

Much heated discussion has been aroused of late by Wendell Willkie's recent "progressive" pronouncements. Mr. Willkie has called for abolition of colonial empires, freedom for India, social security for the common man, and other such ideals galore. I agree 99 per cent, with these demands—or should I say suggestions?—voiced by Mr. Willkie, and I join in reproving those who question his right to say what he has said.

What I question is not the outward appearance of Mr. Willkie's forthright comments on imperialism, but the sincerity of his motives. He is still a leading member of the Republican Party, which is still far from being a movement recognizing that the era of isolationism is out—a movement which hopes to make of the coming century the "American Century" with the U.S. as the chief imperialist of the world and Britain as a sort of junior partner. There are those who will object that all parties in the U.S. have reiterated time and again that they are not out for political aggrandizement. But official political control is no criterion of imperialism; for is not Canada dependent to a much greater extent on our neighbour to the south than on the mother country? That is so-called "economic imperialism," i.e. American imperialism alias "dollar-and-cents" imperialism.

That Mr. Willkie has ulterior motives—and I mean an eye to the 1944 presidential elections—is shown by the fact that, in the U.S. elections early this month, he stated that he supported WITHOUT EXCEPTION every Republican running for office; which includes Ham Fish, arch-isolationist, under whose frank floods of Nazi propaganda were mailed out in the pre-Pearl Harbour days; it also includes those several dozen "gallant Southern gentlemen" who are so vigorously opposing the long-delayed anti-poll tax bill. Willkie saw that the trend of public opinion was beginning to realize how large a part imperialism plays in the causes of wars in general, and he forthwith jumped on the popular bandwagon gaining wide popularity for himself as evidenced by recent Gallup Polls.

I find myself, therefore, in whole-hearted agreement with Willkie's utterances, but in violent opposition to his motives, which seem, upon analysis, to be much less altruistic than they at first sight appear.

Letter Forum

Ed. note: This letter was supposed to have appeared in Monday's Daily but technical confusion prevented it being published until today.

An Open Letter to the Students' Executive Council.

Dear Sirs:

We should like to have a full explanation of your action in banning the meeting scheduled for November 26th, under the sponsorship of the Student Labour Club. It seems to us that the action was carried out hurriedly, and without the full facts at your disposal, in a manner hardly compatible with the traditions of your Council.

On several occasions, members of the current Students' Executive Council have stated before open student meetings that the actions of the student body should be calculated to carry favour with the general public, yet you seem to have achieved the very opposite by your recent decision.

The "Gazette" ran at least one story saying that a body of McGill students were gathering to dispute the claims of Jean Drapeau to represent the youth of the province, and later reported that you had banned this meeting. We have heard the opinion expressed, by many people, both off the campus and on, that this must surely indicate that the Students' Executive Council was not impartial to Drapeau's cause. Mr. Harvey stated that he was surprised to learn that an official body of McGill students should take an action which may be interpreted by outsiders to favour Jean Drapeau.

We did not call the meeting of the Student Labour Club to further the campaign of either of the candidates; we called it to refute the statements made by Drapeau in which he purported to represent the youth of this province. The meeting would have been planned irrespective of the occasion of such a statement, and irrespective of the particular speaker.

In conclusion, we would like to state that we find it hard to reconcile this action of the Students' Executive Council with unofficial statements of some of its members.

We remain,

Yours truly,

THE EXECUTIVE OF THE STUDENT LABOUR CLUB.

The Same Theme

Editor in Chief McGill Daily.

Dear Sir,

Much criticism has appeared in your columns of an article signed by Mr. H. C. F. Shatan.

I, too, would like to make a number of remarks with regard to this, "L'affaire Shatan," however the object of my letter is neither the praise, nor the deprecation of Mr. Shatan's theme, but rather a much more important aspect of the whole matter.

Some critics have made the basis of their objection to Mr. Shatan's remarks, the derogatory and unceremonious style utilized by the latter, others objected on the grounds that an understanding of the difficulties involved precluded a right to a criticism of the "Daily," while still others attempted to utilize the wily sarcasms of a witty mind, and a personal vilification, to achieve their aim of denouncing the author of "the letter."

But no one attempted to discuss the essential statement in the whole letter, namely that which regarded the question of whether the "Daily" really derived deeply enough into the essential realisms and problems which we face.

It may be quite true that because of an understaffing, the Daily is not capable of accomplishing Mr. Shatan's aspirations; it may be quite true that the style of Mr. Shatan's letter was neither flattering, nor complimentary to the effort and time given by so few students to the McGill "Daily."

However, since criticism may be just, despite the fact that it,

(1) Cannot be and is not always constructive,

(2) May have no opportunity of knowing all the factors involved,

(3) May be written in an unappealing way, and since these factors will depend on the character of the writer, rather than on the theme of his argument, we must beware—

For today we allow such things as peculiarity and eccentricity of style to draw our concentrated acumen from the theme of a letter in a college newspaper, shall we tomorrow permit such questions to draw our attention from the gist of articles which will concern our attitudes and our votes?

The university is the home of the development of mature criticism, and mature criticism assumes the ability to separate the essential from the non-essential.

I am glad that Mr. Shatan wrote his letter. I am happy to have read the delirium of the former's article, for it has shown me, as it has no doubt shown many others, that the intelligent and sharp-witted critic must be most careful before he pronounces judgment on all themes, even on those which may look funny, but are meant to be serious.

On Cancellation of Elections Meeting

Editor McGill Daily,

Dear Sir,

The ordered cancellation of the meeting of the Student Labour Club by the Students' Executive Council on the grounds that it is an elections meeting, is a sullen abuse of free speech. A university is the place where pros and cons may and should be discussed—and because the speakers may have been partisan is no reason for the bann. It's easy to see that had there been a speaker on Drapeau's side, the bann would have come still more quickly—for assuredly, the Students' Executive Council would, or will, vote, if they could, or can, on the side of Major-General LaFleche. A partisan speech? So is that which was delivered by Dr. Herman, Finer at the first meeting of the Political Economy Club. So is that which is to be delivered by Dr. Hughes in Moyse Hall.

We must defend the right of a man to speak—with the fact that Mr. Harvey would be speaking on the government side having nothing to do with the question. Moreover, aside from hearing the brilliant speech that Mr. Harvey would be sure to give, the many students who are old enough to exercise their franchise would be more than just interested to hear a speech on the elections. We are sure that if a federal election would be coming up, and Prime Minister King, or one of his henchmen, were to speak here to all the students he would not be forbidden to speak on the campus as a partisan speaker.

What kind of a reconstructed peace are we to have if this is the way we are fighting for it? McGill has just stopped patting itself on the back, after comparing itself with the recent Governors' action at the University of Toronto in forbidding some alien students entrance to one of the affiliated colleges there. McGill can take all its self-esteem back if that is the way it regards the proper exercise of its liberty and freedom, and the proper line of conduct.

If the ban is to try and force the

Red Pucksters To Play Air Force Friday

Flyers Are the Only Team Beaten By McGill

The Redmen will skate out Friday to face for the second time the only team they have been able to overcome, the Air Force. Currently sharing the cellar position with the amazing Army, who upset the appallant in the last game by beating the McGill squad 4-2, the Bell boys have their work cut out for them, in their drive toward the top of the heap. However, the season has only passed the quarter-way mark, and having played two fine games out of three, they are bound to hit their winning stride very soon.

The Air Force has come a long way since their first defeat at the hands of the Redmen. They have been bolstered by the acquisition of the high-scoring duo of Jimmy Planché and Pat Desblens, of municipal league fame, and are currently deadlocked for first place with the fast-skating Navy sextet, who they downed last Friday night. They outweigh the collegians considerably, but odds have never meant anything to the Redmen in the past.

GOOD OFFENSIVE RECORD

The defence is equal to any in the league, and Ritchie gives the Redmen the nod over the others in goalkeeping talent. The combination has proved very effective thus far, and have not allowed more than four goals in one game. The forwards have been backchecking fiercely, and attacking well, but have run into a lot of hard luck around their opponents' nets.

Bud Farmer and Tommy Hale have been playing bangup hockey, and the newcomers have been showing up well of late. Johnny Costigan is beginning to show his expected form, having figured in the only two McGill-scoring plays in the Army game.

The most probable advance that McGill can make by gaining a victory is to move into a tie for second place with the Air Force, with two wins against two losses. There is also the possibility of a complete deadlock in the loop, should the rejuvenated Army squad overcome Hughie Farquharson's Navy sextet, providing the Redmen also win.

Intercompany Swimming Meet Set for Dec. 14

There will be an intercompany swim meet on December 14 in the N.D.G. pool at 8:00 p.m. This is the first meet which has been organized for swimmers this season, and points will be scored on a company basis.

Lists will be posted in all the buildings, and at present there is a list at the gymnasium for all who wish to sign. Due to war difficulties, McGill has been unable to secure the permanent use of a pool this year. Most pools in the vicinity are taxed to the capacity.

It is suggested that those who wish to get in trim for the meet, practice at one of the municipal pools in the city, of which the N.D.G. pool is one of the finest.

MR. RICKEY CAME TO TOWN

Last Saturday afternoon at the St. Denis Club, Hector Racine, President of the Montreal Baseball Club played host at a luncheon to Branch Rickey, President and general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers. The purpose of the luncheon was for Mr. Rickey to meet the local press, and let me tell you "the press sure put the pressure on the press." The main topic of the get-together was the recent dismissal of Clyde Sukeforth, former manager of the Montreal Royals. There had been much talk about town and many opinions expressed on why Sukey had been fired, and so Mr. Rickey clarified the situation and took full responsibility for the action. He said that a change was in the best interests of the club and that he still had plans for Sukeforth within the Brooklyn organization.

Being more explicite, Mr. Racine explained that Sukeforth had been much too lenient with the players on the road and in hotels. He cited the fact that there had been entirely too much drinking on the team, and that Clyde was told to fire or even suspend some of the players which Sukey never did, claiming that the services of the men were too valuable to lose. About Royal's manager next year, Rickey would like to see fat Freddy Fitzsimmons giving orders, but so far no agreement has been made. Fitzsimmons has remarked on several occasions already that he is not enthusiastic over the position, but Branch thinks that Freddy has the potential qualities of a good manager.

Branch Rickey is a man who knows his baseball, and has been very successful in all his past undertakings. As past general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, he is the man who was responsible for bringing the pennant to Sportsman's Park, and making the Cards the world champions. It was Rickey who started and organized the now famous St. Louis farm system, which was the birth place of such sluggers as Enos Slaughter and Stan Musial or pitchers Johnny Beazley and Morten Cooper. Brooklyn has every confidence in this baseball genius who promises big things for the Dodgers fans to cheer about, so Montreal baseball lovers can follow suit and believe Mr. Rickey when he says "I'll do my best to see that you have a winning ball club in Montreal."

HOCKEY TALK

Slumps seem to be the thing at present, and between the McGill Redmen and Montreal Canadiens, there doesn't seem to be that spark with which both teams opened their respective seasons. McGill suffered their second straight loss last Friday at the hands of the Army squad by the score of 4-2, but here's hoping that the Redmen snap out of it and win this coming Friday night. As for the Canucks, a double defeat over the week-end by the fast moving Detroit Red Wings put them in the N.H.L. cellar. The Canadiens have now lost six out of their last eight games and have tied twice. Both coaches Bobby Bell and Dick Irvin are certainly having their troubles.

FOOTBALL OVER THE BORDER.

After triumphing over Georgia Tech 34-0 last Saturday afternoon, the University of Georgia accepted an invitation to play in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena Calif. on New Year's Day. It will be the first visit of the Bulldogs to the Pasadena classic. . . . Frank Sinkwich, Georgia's All-American backfielder star has been chosen for the Heisman Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the outstanding college football player of the year. . . . The biggest upset of the week-end was the routing Boston College, rated the number one team of the year before the game, took from Holy Cross. The score was 55-12, the winners being 4-1 underdogs in the betting.

ODDS AND ENDINGS

Remember the football banquet tomorrow night in the Union Grill Room at 6:30. It promises to be a great climax to a very successful football season. . . . The recent Jimmy Bivins-Lee Savold fight at Madison Square Garden turned out to be a farce. The crowd booed, stamped, clapped, then, finally, got tired of the whole business and sat impatiently awaiting the end. . . . Steve O'Neill, past manager of the Beaumont Club in the Texas League has succeeded Del Baker as pilot of the Detroit Tigers. Beaumont won the Texas championship last year. . . . Boxing tomorrow night at the M.A.A.A. between the Navy and Tommy Parr's Red sluggers. Should be pretty good. That's all for now.

Ping Pong and Snooker Tournaments Being Held

The McGill Union is now the scene of the annual snooker and ping pong tournaments. Although the draw has already been made and matches are in progress, it may not be too late for entries. The price of entering is twenty-five cents for ping pong, and fifty cents for the snooker tourney.

There are at present 36 participants in the snooker meet, and 18 in the table tennis. The former will be made up of two out of three games for each draw, and the latter, the best of five. There will be a prize of $2.50 for the winner of each meet, in the form of credits at the Tuck shop.

The meet was a great success last year, for the price is an inducement to all regular players to play because it will enable even the losers to get two games at a reduced rate.

Tennis Semi-Finals To Conclude This Afternoon

This afternoon at 1:15 p.m. at the Montreal Indoor Tennis Club the semi-final round in the McGill Tennis Tournament will be completed, when Henneman meets Freisenbruch, for the right to play Bob Watt for the championship.

Henneman was the runner-up last year, entering the finals by virtue of his victory over second-seeded Jean Richer. Freisenbruch is a newcomer to McGill tennis circles, and has displayed some fine tennis in reaching the semi-finals.

Bob Watt, the defending champ, played one of the toughest matches of his career the other day, when he was forced to go five sets before downing Richer. The last three sets went into extra games, and at one point Richer led two sets to one.

M. B. L. Schedule Begins Friday

McGill Faces Sir George Williams in Second Game

Oilers and St. Hubert Will Play in Curtain Raiser of First Double Bill

The Montreal Basketball League held a meeting last night, and it was announced that the schedule will begin on Friday, December 4th, with two games to be played at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium. The complete schedule has not been released, but the next doubleheader will be played on Friday, December 18th, and the teams will then be inactive until after the Christmas holidays. The loop is composed of five teams, the Pats and Oilers, of last year's circuit, as well as McGill, with the St. Hubert R.C.A.F. detachment and Sir George Williams College entering the loop for the first time. McGill will play in the night-cap of the first double bill, against the Georgians.

It was originally planned to have three games played an evening at the gymnasium, with one of them played on the east floor, simultaneously with one on the large floor. Now it appears that both floors may have to be used continuously some nights since there may be two service league games scheduled for this Friday night as well.

TEAMS STRONG

The McGill squad looks to be a contender, although two stars will be inactive until after the holidays. Lee Vernon, a prolific scorer has an injured ankle, while Nello Delbel will not be able to take the time from his intern duties at the hospital. The Oilers will once again be a strong threat, although they will be without Ferraro, Richman, and Wilson. They have acquired two players of football fame, Len Hutton and Ted Edwards, who have also made a name for themselves in basketball circles. Sir George Williams won the intermediate championship for three years consecutively, while the St. Hubert squad boasts several American stars.

This year the practices have been well attended. The boxers are coached by Tommy Parr, a veteran of colorful reputation. Coach Parr has been victorious in over 200 bouts and was champion of the B.E.F. The program will be well filled starting with exhibition fights between two Navy men and by Tommy Bishop and Guy Grimaldi of McGill. This will be followed by four fights between John Dickson, Ronny McKinnon, and Keith McLellan, and Bud Elliott against four sailors whose names are not definitely established as yet.

Gridders to Close Season With Banquet

Press and Staff To Be Guests in Union Tonight.

Tomorrow evening at 6:30 p.m. the McGill gridders will hold their annual banquet at the Union. This is the official end of the football season, which was very successful this year in spite of the confusion caused by the harvesting exodus, and consequent disruption of the intramural league.

Drs. Tees and Lamb and Mr. Finlay of the Athletic Department will be present as well as Coaches Kerr, Cloghesy, and Bennett. The press is to be represented by Dink Carroll and Baz O'Meara, Referee Harold Platt, and R. Stewart Willis, president of the Students' Council will also be on hand.

The football season was successful this year, particularly in the exhibition games which drew a good turn-out from the student body. Although the last game for the unofficial city championship was lost by a narrow margin, to the intense disappointment of sport fans; the Redmen showed a brand of football which should prove an important factor in the revival of football enthusiasm in Montreal.

At this meeting, to be held on Friday at 8.30 p.m. in the Union Ball Room, there will be a free showing of a movie in natural colour, depicting the life and scenery of the West Indian Islands.

The Club is showing these movies as a part of their effort to make it possible for students to understand and visualise the Islands. The entire series, photographed in Kodachrome, takes the form of a tour around the Windward and Leeward Islands. The films, the property of the British West Indian Trade Commission, have been lent to the Club by the Trade Commissioner, Mr. Rex Stollmeyer. The executive has made certain that there will be no shortage of seating for the performance, and accommodation is being provided for about two hundred and fifty people.

WAR SERVICE PROGRAMME FOR WOMEN

Volunteer Services: An error was made in last week's notice, which stated that students would be expected to report for duty again in the week of January 6th. Volunteers are not required by the University to continue their service until the beginning of the new term, January 11th. In most cases however, the need in the agencies is particularly urgent during the Christmas season and any students who can continue her work is urged to do so.

First Aid (Tuesday evening class). The University is continuing inquiries as to the standing of students who are presenting the Red Cross Home Nursing certificate in place of the St. John Ambulance voucher. Meanwhile students in this course are requested to continue with it. Those who borrowed books or bandages are reminded that these must be returned.

Home Nursing. Students enrolled in either the Wednesday or Thursday sections will be notified next week as to the date of the termination of their course.

Child Welfare. Students will be notified next week as to the options open to them for next term. No student in this course should leave for the holidays without having signed up for a course for next term.

Other Courses. As usual this week.

Note. a) Students are again reminded that any absences during a given week must be reported and explained to Mrs. Tyrrell by Saturday of that week.

b) If a special lecture, test or field trip is scheduled at an hour that conflicts with a student's War Service requirement, the student must notify the professor in charge of the special lecture that she has a timetable conflict, so that he may, if he wishes, take the necessary steps to obtain leave for her through the timetable committee of the University. Students who fail to obtain leave in this manner will be counted as absent without leave from their War Service classes. It is not sufficient for a student to notify the War Service office that she has been instructed by a member of the faculty to attend such special lectures, as leave can only be obtained through the Professor's own request.

Exec. Director,
